"As far as the verse is concerned there is in this volume something more than mere promise; the performance is at times remarkable; there is beauty not only of thought and invention—and the invention is of a positive kind—but also of expression and rhythm. There is a lilt in Mr. Neuburg's poems; he has the impulse to sing, and makes his readers feel that impulse."—The Morning Post.

"There is a certain grim power in some of the imaginings concerning death, as 'The Dream' and 'The Recall,' and any reader with a liking for verse of an unconventional character will find several pieces alter his taste."—The Daily Telegraph.

"Here is a poet of promise."—The Daily Chronicle.

"It is not often that energy and poetic feeling are united so happily as in this little book."—The Morning Leader.

"There is promise and some fine lines in these verses."—The Times.
